Thank you for submitting your formative.

Noted there is an either or choice for your title, settle on the title that you feel mostly encapsulates what you want to say. Your title/sare quite expansive and so given that you only have 15 minutes presenting the subject, [and the tutor discussion regarding deep research taking place for any summative] ensure that when you submit your summative for the Research Proposal that the content is sufficiently focused and doesn't have too many tangents running through the content and context. If research isn't focused then you may experience research outcomes that are too 'thin'or superficial because you have too many different aspects to discuss.

It is fine to compare European sectors for pay gaps, but potentially pick two European countries/areas that are at poll opposite ends regarding gender pay gap, [and so one country or area of a country that does better than another country/or area of a country for example]. This approach will help keep a focused pros and cons discussion occurring, [without too many tangents developing; for example if you speak of several countries your research will be thinner and less focused, given the time allocated for the presentation].

If you are also then drawing through the perspective of communism and its influences as well as contemporary working/pay gaps regarding gender in European countries, please do reflect on my comment regarding focused research and the amount of time allocated for the summative itself and that a focused, well researched discussion needs to occur.

*This is a note added to all student formative feedback here: Generic comments to support your formative/looking forward to summative: Please ensure that you engage with deep research for your summative, if your chosen subject builds upon any other summative assignment that you have completed previously, ensure that this current summative has a completely different context to avoid self-plagiarism. Please carefully listen to all related seminars which support this current summative and all module announcements that have been posted to also support this summative.

Wishing you the best of luck now for your actual summative submission,

With best wishes

Karen
